

EUROPEAN STUDIES (ES)

MASTER

Aalborg University offers a two year (four semesters) Master of Social Science programme in European Studies. The focus is on European integration, and the courses are in English. The programme is open to Danish and foreign students with a B.S. or B.A. degree in social science

We offer an innovative Master's programme on European Integration, understood in a wide sense. The courses cover a wide range of issues in this context, but most of the time our students can work independently on special subjects of their interest, in group work but also individually. A simulation game is also part of the programme. The many common activities make it easy to find friends.

PROBLEM-BASED LEARNING IN A COLOURFUL INTERNATIONAL MILIEU

We believe in interdisciplinarity and problem-based, active learning to a very high extent. An internship at e.g. an EU institution is also part of the programme, assuring a combination of theoretical and practical knowledge. Together with our neighbouring program of Development and International Relations, with whom we cooperate on many fields, we are part of a colourful international milieu, also on the side of the teachers. Our students thereby also learn to work in international teams, something which many employers appreciate. The Master's programme in European Studies aims at giving students a theoretical knowledge of economic and political developments in Europe and insights into the institutions and processes of the European Union. Students will also improve their ability to analyse economic, social, cultural or political aspects of developments in Europe within an interdisciplinary context.

ACADEMIC CONTENT

The four-semester programme (120 ECTS) is organised as follows:

- The first semester (September 1st until mid-January) consists of course work and project work in the areas of comparative regional integration, the external role of the EU and of International Relations.
